THE JUDICIAL RETURN.

Official Figures of the West Virginia Election for Judge of the Court of Appeals.

The following is the result of the election in this State on the 10th of October, 1882, for the successorship to Judge Moore on the Supreme Bench:

Table with 3 columns: Name, Votes, and Percentage. Includes names like Barbour, Berkeley, Bode, etc.

The Second District.

A number of Republicans in the Second district feel very indignant over the Legislature's insinuations as to an intention or effort on the part of Mr. Mason or his friends to get some illegal or fraudulent advantage over Mr. Wilson, the Democratic candidate for Congress, in the matter of the returns, and several of them have written us protesting against such insinuations as not only uncalculated but outrageous.

The friends of Mr. Mason have only desired to get at the facts in each county, for future use if need be, and have made no effort to "bull-doze" anybody. How could he or any friend "bull-doze" the Democratic Board of Commissioners in Pendleton county? The only fact that he desired to ascertain in that county or any other county was simply as to the true character of the returns actually made. He is not hunting a flaw in the formal proceedings of boards through which to creep into Congress. Far from it, Mr. Mason does not desire, and would not accept a seat in Congress secured by the mere omission of a formality of any kind. It is therefore only in regard to facts that tend to show a defect of the will of the voters that his friends have been concerned about.

The mere fact that the Pendleton county board did not meet within the time required by law is not a circumstance on which they propose to lay any weight whatever. They attach much more weight to the illegal votes that were cast in Jefferson county for Mr. Wilson. We refer to tickets printed, circulated and voted as Republican tickets in that county, by which it seems that a number of voters were deceived into voting against Mr. Mason when they desired to vote for him, and supposed from the heading of the ticket that they were voting for him. It is understood that quite a number of these tickets were thus voted, enough to much more than change the true result. In this matter, after proper investigation, proves to be as now properly reported, Mr. Wilson is not elected, whatever the face of the returns may say, and this is one of the facts connected with the election that will be proved.

Mr. Mason and his friends do not desire any merely technical advantage, and hence whatever the returns of any county are in form or not, or whether they were declared within the time specified by law, is not a material question with them, but simply whether the true result in the county was ascertained and declared—or, in other words, whether the correct expression of the voters was certified to the Governor.

As to "counting out" and "bull-dozing" and all such groundless insinuations or assertions by the Register, one of our correspondents writes as follows:

"It might be well to remind the Register that there are only two cases of counting out on record in the history of the politics of West Virginia. The first is where the supervisors of Wetzel county, by mere clerical error, counted out Judge Harrison in 1872, and a Democratic Governor declined to accept the corrected returns, and gave the certificate of election to Judge Lewis, who did not pretend to have received a majority of the votes. The other case is where the commissioners of Marion county in 1880 threw out the Benton's Ferry voting precinct on a mere technicality in order to elect Fountain Smith Senator over Farber. Every intelligent man knows that Mr. Smith was never elected to the position he now holds. In view of these well known cases it comes with all ill grace from the Register to indulge in ungrounded insinuations of fraud against Mr. Mason's friends, who are only seeking the truth in regard to the vote, and with no desire to influence or change the result in any way."

The Cause of Parties. Editors Intelligencer. BINGHAM, CO., W. VA., November 3.—A preceding excess of money was one among the great causes of our 1873 panic. When money became abundant the price of property rose, as it always does under such circumstances, from the depreciation of the money. Then the masses who had means or credit purchased heavily, thinking that the price would still advance, and that they by simply holding a short time could sell at a fancy profit. But they held too long. Another great cause of that panic was that the flood of money was so generally distributed among the people. Thus they, who lately were held aloof as not responsible, now had money to make a down payment, and by giving a lien on purchased property, they became the most desirable purchasers, and accordingly, the most coveted. These purchasers, unwary and inexperienced in the game of business, were competitors against every wary and prudent purchaser. The greater the number of purchasers the greater the competition, and the greater the competition the higher the price rose, so when the crash came, the greater was the loss.

Again, as money under the above circumstances was so easily gotten, many a man, judging from what he had amassed in so short a time, believed that he had at last discovered the great secret of fortune. He took pride in his financial success, and, counting on continued success, paid all he had in that fatal down payment and went in debt for the balance. Most of the people who having acted the same way, those debts were thrown upon them, and when the panic was sorely pressed for money, he had the consolation of knowing that his neighbors were in the same fix. Another great cause was the suddenness with which the money was thrown out to the people. If the masses had not received it suddenly and simultaneously, there would not have been the competition there was. If the boom had come gradually, the consequent purchasing and debt-making would have continued several years longer, and the making of some of the debts would have made a demand for money, which, to some extent, would have counteracted the investing spirit.

Next contraction of the currency (most probably a wise one) occurred in the autumn of 1873. The avarice of the money lender preyed upon those whose avarice induced them to buy beyond their means.

Then came the crash. The shylock who clothed himself in the name of business, and drew his coils around a nation of debtors. The avarice of the money lender preyed upon those whose avarice induced them to buy beyond their means.

The tendency of the above causes cannot be ignored. Now, when the uniformity of the volume of money is greatly disturbed, let the wise beware. A regular, uniform volume of money is the great desideratum in the carrying on of business.

We do not exactly get the point of the above article. There was no sudden inflation of the currency. It came on gradually through the war and after the war, reaching its maximum in 1865. The contraction referred to occurred in two ways, (1) the refunding of the temporary certificates and short obligations of the Government into long bonds, and (2) the improved credit of the Government by which the premium on gold fell off.
